

The FCC should NOT re-consider number portability for wireless or any other provider. Phone providers have been charging for portability without ever providing portability for quite some time. Furthermore, phone number portability facilitates competition by allowing consumers to easily choose the most competitive product offering and provider that best suits their particular needs. Changing that "locks" the consumer to their existing provider with little or no choice.